Multidisciplinary care of Older People

Involving other disciplines of medicine for holistic care of older people

Older persons either have multiple medical comorbidities which are addressed by different medical branches.

Thus specialists from different branches need to share their expertise, and in this process, learn from each other.

As psychiatrists dealing with older adults, a working knowledge of prevention or first-line treatments for commonly seen illnesses like falls, diabetes mellitus, stroke, hypertension etc, will be useful tool.

By doing so, we can break down silos and foster a more holistic understanding of our patients' needs.
